Course Description

Clinical informatics is a multidisciplinary field that uses data aggregation and analysis to improve healthcare delivery and support clinical decision making. This course is an overview of the field of clinical informatics and how physical therapists can become more involved in the development of their organization's electronic health record system. Core competencies for informaticists will be presented, as well as a dive into what skills to develop when transitioning into non-patient facing career paths in clinical informatics and health information technology.

Objectives

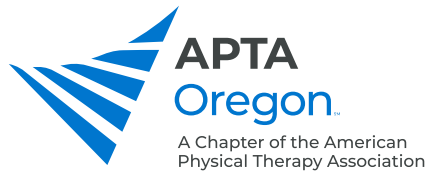

- Define the role of the clinical informaticist and how their work supports the practice of physical therapy.
- Examine and compare multi-disciplinary approaches to clinical informatics education, training, and certification.
- Identify opportunities for including clinical informatics in your PT practice and how to prepare for a career as a clinical informatics specialist.
- Introduce related roles in the field of health information technology that would benefit from greater PT representation.

Speaker

Jen Craft, PT, DPT, Clinical Informatics Specialist

Jen Craft, PT, DPT is a Clinical Informatics Specialist at OHSU where she supports clinical workflow and documentation for ambulatory providers within the OHSU Health system. Prior to transitioning into clinical informatics she practiced as a PT for 10 years, predominantly in outpatient orthopedics and sports rehab. Jen earned her bachelor's degree from Miami University in 2005 and her DPT from the University of Cincinnati in 2009. She is currently pursuing a master's in healthcare management from OHSU. Jen is certified in EpicCare Ambulatory and Lean Process Project Management. Clinically, Jen holds certifications in Herman & Wallace pelvic floor rehab, BikePT bike fitting, IAMT dry needling, and BASI Pilates.
